

Abstract

Encapsulation for an organic electronic component, production method therefor, and use

The invention discloses for the first time a high-density encapsulation that far outperforms the heretofore known encapsulation technologies, due to the fact that a weak point of the encapsulation, such as for example the transition from the capsule to the substrate or the electronic component as a whole, is covered with a protective film.